Northwest of the town of Mazarron, at a distance of about 9 kms, the village of La Majada is located. It is believed that the name derives from the fact that this district historically was a place frequented by a shepherd to rest his cattle, and then he started a settlement that grew into a village. The festivities of La Majada, held in honour of the Immaculate Conception, whose festival is in December, are traditionally held in August and September. The celebrations always have events where the residents of nearby villages are also invited, sharing traditions and local cuisine as ruleras crumbs and a traditional hot chocolate with fritters putting an end to the celebrations.
