It enjoys maximum privacy with no close neighbours or noise nuisance. The estate covers 14 hectares, with almond trees about 25 years old as the main crop, as well as numerous olive trees, holm oaks and carob trees. There are also fig and other fruit trees close to the house. The finca is fully accessible by a 1.5 km long internal lane and receives an annual subsidy from the Junta de Andalucia. There is the possibility to install beehives and solar panels for self-consumption. Water comes from a well at the bottom of the property, with a water purification system including double filter and UV bulb, and a cistern near the house with a capacity of 30m³. Electricity is supplied by high voltage to a nearby transformer, with a three-phase electricity contract for the well motor. The internet connection is via a 4/5G router.
