Dolores is a peaceful town with a strong local identity, featuring whitewashed houses, small plazas, and a friendly community. The surrounding countryside is rich in farmland, just a short drive (around 15 km) from the beaches of Guardamar del Segura and Torrevieja, making it a great spot for those who enjoy both rural and coastal life. The town hosts several traditional festivals, such as the Fiestas Patronales in honor of Our Lady of Sorrows (Virgen de los Dolores), typically in September, featuring parades, music, and local celebrations. Due to its proximity to the Costa Blanca, many British and other European expats have settled in the area, giving it an international feel while still maintaining a strong Spanish character.
